at 1600 on Thursday 29 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Very strong winds in the southwest tonight with Storm Evert.

This Evening and Tonight:
Winds strengthening through the evening to give an unseasonably windy and wet night, particularly in Cornwall with severe gales around the coasts. A band of heavy rain will move northeastwards across the region, followed by heavy blustery showers. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Friday:
A day of scattered showers and sunny spells, with winds gradually easing through the morning. Feeling fresher than recently, particularly in the wind, and in any showers. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Conditions remaining unsettled through the weekend and into the start of next week, with sunny spells and showers, some heavy at times. Feeling a little warmer with lighter winds.
